On behalf of the Organising Committee, under the aegis of the Governing Board of the Society, we are pleased and deeply honored to inform you that the next National Congress of the Italian Society for Neuroscience (SINS) will take place in Torino from the 14th to the 17th of September 2023.

We hope that the pandemics will be fully resolved and we are confidently working for an in-presence celebration of neuroscience, characterized by an exciting multidisciplinary scientific program complemented by lively poster sessions, with numerous opportunities to connect face to face with prestigious italian and foreign researchers in neuroscience.

The symposia, proposed by researchers and selected by the Scientific Committee and in Plenary Lectures held by italian and international researchers, will be strongly oriented to multidisciplinary contents and will favor the direct involvement of young scientists.

The multidisciplinary topics of the meeting will be focused on processes regarding nervous system function and pathogenesis of neurological and psychiatric disorders, with particular attention to the hottest topics in basic science and to cutting-edge diagnostic, therapeutic and investigative technologies.

The program will also include special interest satellite events, many opportunities for social activities and ample space to share scientific and promotional materials.

We are excited to bring the community together in 2023 and to discuss our research, network and develop collaborations.

CENTRO CONGRESSI LINGOTTO

Torino is an attractive city, located in northwest Italy and surrounded on two sides by the Alps. It has good transport links, with an airport served by 23 international airlines as well as road and public transport networks.

The city has a rich cultural history and is known for its many art galleries, restaurants, churches, palaces, opera houses, piazzas, parks, gardens, theatres, libraries and museums. The skyline is dominated by the huge tower of the Mole Antonelliana, home of the tallest museum in the world.

Lingotto is the name of a district of Turin, Italy, as well as the name of the Lingotto building in Via Nizza. It once housed a car factory built by Italian automotive company Fiat and today houses the administrative headquarters of the manufacturer and a multipurpose centre projected by architect Renzo Piano.

The congress center was built under the southern part, with 12 permanent halls of various capacities, including the largest one called “Sala Cinquecento,” all interconnected, with a total availability of 3500 seats.
